THE PROBLEM

Fake "digital arrest" calls drain families' savings during the call itself: in Hinglish or a regional language, from a new number every day. The people targeted are elders at home, farmers waiting for a PM-Kisan installment, and kirana owners living on UPI, often on basic phones. Caller ID and telco filters judge the number; Google's on-device scam detection needs a Pixel (under 1% of Indian phones) and warns only in English.

The insight: scammers change numbers every day, but they never change the script.

1 · Pose "Main CBI officer bol raha hoon" → 2 · Scare "warrant nikla hai" → 3 · Isolate "kisi ko mat batana" → 4 · Ask "OTP bataiye"

WHAT RUKO DOES: IT LISTENS FOR THE SCRIPT

- Hears the call itself on speakerphone. Gnani Prisma transcribes it live, including Hindi-English code-mix mid-sentence, and auto-detects the language.
- Speaks in 10 Indian languages with Gnani Timbre: slowly with pauses for elders, whispered so the caller hears less, or in a family member's cloned voice (with consent).
- After the call: a ready 1930 / cybercrime.gov.in complaint, who said what (Prisma diarization), a one-tap number report and a ready Chakshu report.
- Warns before the next step ("next they'll ask for your OTP"). In a real run it warned 0.65 s after "kisi ko mat batana", before money was asked for.
- Family Shield: the daughter's phone turns red live, with what was said and what to do; push alerts even when the page is closed.
- Any phone, every day: keypad phones merge the call with Ruko's line, so the warning plays inside the call. Check any SMS, link, UPI request, WhatsApp voice note or number; Android warns before you pick up.
